中葡橋樑 A Bridge for Sino-Portuguese Cooperation and Exchange

本院堅持“紮根澳門，背靠祖國，面向世界，爭創一流”的辦學理念，利用葡語方面的優勢，開拓多元化的對外學術合作，特別是拓展與葡萄牙高等院校的合作一直是本院對外交往的重點工作之一。本院與葡萄牙各大專院校本着平等互利、優勢互補、真誠合作的原則，在多個學術領域展開交流與合作，取得可喜的成果。近年，本院繼續深化與葡萄牙開展的合作項目，更好發揮中葡學術文化交流的橋樑作用。

President Lei Awarded UL Honorary Doctorate

President Lei Heong Lok was awarded an honorary doctorate by the University of Lisbon (UL) in May 2012 in recognition of MPI's contribution to preserving Portuguese-speaking culture in Macao, promoting cooperation and development between Macao and Portuguese higher education institutions, and enhancing Sino-Portuguese relations. The honorary doctorate is the highest award given by the UL to people with major contributions towards the development of Portuguese language and culture. President Lei is the first Chinese scholar to have received one.

Prof António Nóvoa, UL President, said in his speech that even before the handover, when Prof Lei Heong Lok worked in the Xinhua News Agency, he had helped to promote friendly bilateral relations. Later, as the President of MPI, he had made further efforts to explore cooperative models for Portuguese teaching and research between Portugal and Macao, as well as between Portugal and China. Under his leadership, the joint cultivation of bilingual (Chinese and Portuguese) talents, exchange of teachers and students and cooperation in research projects were achieved, promoting the cultural development of Portugal, China and Macao and hence important contributions were made in cultural exchanges between China and Portugal aiding their friendly development. In addition, Prof Nóvoa also noted that the cooperation experience of MPI with the Portuguese higher education system over many years had established important examples for Portugal and the Macao SAR Government, as well as for cooperative ventures between institutions of higher learning in general.
